1. A prominent member of the Palestine Arab Party (PAP) reports that Emile al-Qahtani, during his recent visit to Egypt, was given the following information about the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem by the French Consul in Cairo. According to a message which the Consul claimed to have received from the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Mufti was living at Montebleau. He was entirely at liberty to see any visitors whom he wished to see and a car had been placed at his disposal so that he could make short sight-seeing trips. He had not been visited by any Palestinian Arabs but he was in constant touch with a certain Sayyid Qaidur ibn Sharif.
2. Emile al-Qahtani also claimed that Sir Pauling had asked the French Government to send the Mufti to Egypt, but his request had not been granted. The Mufti himself had been trying to persuade the French authorities to send him to Beirut. Emile al-Qahtani believed that the French might ultimately agree to this proposal if a settlement were reached between France and the Lebanon.
3. Commenting on the remarkable degree of hate still enjoyed by the Mufti among many classes in Palestine, a well informed Arab states that the PAP could torpedo every scheme for creating an Arab Higher Committee by claiming that no such committee, unless it were headed by the Mufti, possessed any powers of jurisdiction. They should not forget that it was the Mufti who had stated to the British Government and had proudly declared that he would not consent to enter into any form of negotiations with the deportees had been brought back to Palestine from the Seychelles. Lost the Mufti's record should be forgotten, the PAP was planning to conduct a propaganda campaign on his behalf in the towns and villages.
4. As an example of the popularity of the Mufti among the followers of political parties other than the PAP, an irib resident in Jaffa reports that one of the leaders of the Defense Front, who is now the Mayor of Ramleh, Sheikh Mustafa al-Maqdisi, held a meeting on 12 July 1945 to collect money for Musa al-Alami's fund redemption actions. In the course of this meeting a proposal was adopted that a petition should be sent to the Palestine Government asking for the immediate return of the Mufti and all the other political deportees.
